Hi Hilary,

I spoke with Cindy on these cases. We want you guys to finish reviewing these cases first so EOD can determine what type of cases they are and how to process them. Your evaluations will help Cindy determine how many people she will need to process these cases. At that point, you can then help EOD staff to develop them, etc.

If you have any questions, let me know. Thanks, Mike

Hi Mike,

After talking with Justin and reviewing some of the cases I've looked at (11), we agreed that only one of the cases would be favorable. The other cases, while not engaging in political campaign intervention/activities, may need further development because it is questionable whether they're even engaging in social welfare activities. Many are simply propaganda.

Justin explained to me the approach he and Susan Cundiff took while reviewing ACA cases in TEDS which involved having weekly meetings with the agents and discussing the cases. He thought a similar approach would work with these cases. We would go through them and talk to Cindy, etc. about our thoughts on each case, issues for further development, and other things they may want to consider. Is that an acceptable approach?

Thanks,
Hilary
